THE AUTUMN-TIME. - In the eternal round of seasons there is nothing strange; and yet a very common and pleasant custom it is, as one old winter sets his snowy foot and icy grasp upon us the soft balmy airs of spring are anticipated wholly with delight. Neither drizzling rain, nor omni-present slush, find a place in ble enough—uncomfortably palpable, and might be insupportable, but for the expectation of the approaching delights of summer, whose clear skies and rich results and sign and rich results and summer, whose clear skies and rich results are palpable, and summer, whose clear skies and rich results are palpable, and best. whose clear skies, and rich vegetation in turn lead us to forget the sweltering temperature and long droughts which in due order assert themselves and incline ever discontented humanity to cast another glance forward-this time to autumn, the season now opened.

Of all seasons autumn promises most, and disappoints least. Melancholy it may be, yet its melancholy brings no touch of pain. There is death in the wailing winds-a dirge they seem to chant for the withering leaves, falling fruit and decaying flowers, even as the fresher breezes of spring are a natal anthem. But it is death dealing with maturity, and, however sad, but fulfilling its mission at a natural and befitting period. The process is suggestive of calmness and repose, and every surrounding helps to produce that effect. If man is influenced at all, it is into a quieter, more thoughtful mood, and for once he feels measurably well disposed to linger, content with the present, instead of again taxing anticipation .-Golden roads; fields and forests in purple, yellow and russet; delicate, many-tinted twilights and all softened, subdued and invested with an additional charm by such haze as that which belongs to our Indian summer—there is at no other time so exquisite a treat for the eye.

LADIES AND VINEGAR.—Taken in moderation there is no doubt that vinegar is beneficial, but in excess it impairs the digestive organs. Experiments on artificial digestion show that, if the quantity of acid be diminished, digestion | les from the country. is retarded; if increased beyond a certain point digestion is arrested. There is reason, theredigestion is arrested. There is reason, therefore, in that vulgar notion, unhappily too often E. relied on, that vinegar helps to keep down any alarming adiposity, and that ladies who dread the disappearance of their graceful outlines in curves of plumpness expanding into "fat" may alarming adiposity. curves of plumpness expanding into "fat" may arrest so dreadful a result by liberal potations of vinegar, but they can only so arrest it at the far more dreadful expense of their health. The amount of acid which will keep them thin will amount of acid which will keep them thin will destroy their digestive powers. Portal gives a case which should be a warning: "A few years ago a young lady in easy circumstances enjoyed good health; she was very plump, had a good FRENCH WINDOW GLASS & PUTTY. good health; she was very plump, had a good appetite, and a complexion blooming with roses and lilies. She began to look upon her plumpness with suspicion; for her mother was very fat and she was afraid of becoming like her Accordingly she consulted a woman who advised her to drink a glass of vinegar daily. The young lady followed the advice and her plumpness diminished. She was delighted with the success of the experiment, and continued it for more than a month. She began to have a cough; but it was dry at its commencement, and was considered as a slight cold which would go off. Meantime from dry it became moist, a slow fever came on, and a difficulty of breathing; her body became lean and wasted away; night swelling of the feet and of the legs succeeded, and a diarrice terminated her life." Therefore, young ladies, be boldly fat! Never pine for graceful slimness and romantic pallor; but if nature means you to be ruddy and rotund, accept it with a laughing grace, which will captivate more hearts than all the paleness of a circulating library.

PRECIOUS STONES .- An interesting paper on the subject of precious stones appears in a recent number of the St. Petersburg Gazette. M. Gilson, the author, has just completed a journey round the world, undertaken for the express purpose of making inquiries into this branch of trade. From his researches it appears that, owing principally to the plentiful supply from the South African fields, diamonds are at a lower price than they have been for ten years past. Pearls and emeralds, on the other hand, are at a premium. At New York Furniture Works and Saw Mill in opal about the size of a moderate-sized olive would fetch, at the present time, about 2200 roubles, a sapphire of the same size would be worth 1800 roubles, an emerald 10,000, a diamond 18,000 and a ruby 50,000. In Europe these prices would vary somewhat, opals and sapphires fetching more and emeralds less. Pearls are now brought from Central America. California and the Persian Gulf, but they none of them rival those of the East Indies. The diamonds annually imported from South Afries into America are worth about seven million roubles, and the importation into Europe a verages about the same. Many of them are of good size, and nearly all, without exception, of a yellowish tinge, the consequence being that diamonds of similar color have actually gone down 75 per cent, in the market. Diamonds, indeed, would have fallen lower in value had it not been that the realization of enormous fortunes in America through petroleum and military contracts created an excessive demand. A similar depreciation in the price of diamonds was occasioned at the time of the discovery of the Brazilian diamond mine, Golconda having previously supplied the market. But the stones soon regained their original value, and it may be confidently expected MOSQUITO NET! that the effect of the African diggings will be also merely temporary.
